Contributor Gives Brief History of a Gallant Man.

Editor Climax:—In your issue of 24th of Feb. 1909, you gave notice of the death of Capt. T. S. Gibson, with a brief record of his family history, etc., etc., but as indicated by the term "Captain," his war record was omitted, which was the most conspicuous part of his life, and for this reason I am prompted to recount some of the many stirring incidents in his life. Being raised in the same county, Lee county, Va., which is a part of the Old Dominion, and knowing Capt. Gibson, who was a life-long friend of my father, from my childhood, I desire to pay tribute to his sterling qualities as a soldier and citizen, and to his unflinching courage under the many trying ordeals of life.

I well recall in the early Summer of 1861 at Ross Hill, Lee county, Va., seeing Capt. Gibson at the head of his Company, consisting of 120 infantrymen, the most of whom were under 20 years of age, and were of the best families of Lee county, this being the first company in Lee county to enlist in the Confederate cause. Capt. Gibson's Company joined the 27th Virginia Regiment Confederate Volunteers, commanded by Col. Falkner, where he served with distinction for one year through Eastern Virginia, being in most of the severe engagements under Lee and Jackson until his company was cut down by death, sickness and capture to a mere handful. In the meantime Capt. Gibson having received a wound from a burning shell, which incapacitated him for infantry service, was permitted to resign and return home, where in the Spring of 1862 he raised a second company. Among the first engagements after his return was at or near Cleveland, Tenn., where there was a very severe engagement between the Federal soldiers commanded by General Woodford, and the Confederate commanded by General Hodges. A Federal Captain was in the act of shooting General Hodges down when a close runner came between the Federal Captain and Capt. Gibson on the Confederate side, in which after each had emptied their revolvers Capt. Gibson cut down and killed his assassin, the Federal Captain, with his sabre.

Later his command was transferred to the Eastern Department and entered into the Pennsylvania raid, where after the destruction of Chambersburg, Pa., the Confederates recrossed the South branch of the Potomac at Moccasin, West Virginia, where Capt. Gibson in a severe engagement received a second wound, which again proved fatal and disabled him for further service until near Gen. Lee's surrender.

After the close of the war Capt. Gibson returned to his county and engaged successfully in his business pursuits to begin his losses necessitated by the ravages of war, of which he had seen more than his share, when he was again shot from behind, the ball entering the back and passing entirely through the body. From this wound Capt. Gibson suffered for months before his final recovery. This cowardly act was committed by a man who had been a camp follower of the Federal army, who had a private grudge against Capt. Gibson, but was wanting in moral courage to meet an honorable, brave and courageous ex-Confederate soldier face to face. This party left Lee county during the war, and made it his business to return to Lee county to see his death being at Memphis, Tenn.

One of the attributes of Capt. Gibson was his unwavering loyalty to his country in the Lee Cause, to whom his doors were always open ready to receive with warm heart and welcome hand any of his comrades who returned from the war. Nothing of a private nature, except sickness, ever kept him from this annual reunion, the last one he attended before his death being at Memphis, Tenn.

Capt. Gibson died at the home of his son, Dr. H. R. Gibson and brother in Richmond, Ky., surrounded by most of his family, whose devotion to him in his declining days, was most beautiful, even anticipating every supposed want or comfort money and affection could bestow and was accompanied back to his native home and to the State he loved so well and for which he had offered up his life and given his best service in the dark days from 1861 to 1865, where he was laid to rest under the shadow of the Cumberland Mountains amidst the scenes of his early life and more mature years, there to await the last Bugle Call that shall awake Lee, Jackson, Johnson, Stewart and the unnumbered hosts of the Lee Cause to that judgment verdict to all.

Woman's Friend

Nearly all women suffer at times from female ailments. Some women suffer more acutely and more constantly than others. But whether you have little pain or whether you suffer intensely, you should take Wine of Cardui and get relief.

Cardui is a safe, natural medicine, for women, prepared scientifically from harmless vegetable ingredients. It acts easily on the female organs and gives strength and tone to the whole system.

TAKE CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

Mrs. Verna Wallace, of Sanger, Tex., writes: "Cardui has done more for me than I can describe. Last spring I was taken with female inflammation and consulted a doctor, but to no avail, so I took Cardui, and inside of three days, I was able to do my housework. Since then my trouble has never returned." Try it.

On "Hollow street in London is a row of buildings that any sightseer passing on top of a motor bus would recognize at once as having been left among modern buildings from a past age. It is called the Simple Inn, and here Dr. Johnson wrote his "Lives."

One morning after the battle of Culloden, which ended the rebellion of Scotland led by the pretender, three footmen who had been captured in "the great Jacobite" were being ordered out of the Simple Inn by the "Gent."

"You must go," said the "Gent." "You must go," said the "Gent." "You must go," said the "Gent."
